Hi Noren,

I know that the City of Sunnyvale has done a good job in ensuring that new buildings follow specific standards, use non-toxic and even green materials, and make the least impact on humans and the environment possible. Yet, I won't be available to attend the Planning Commission meeting tonight (08-25-08) or go to the library to see the report, so I am not sure how will we minimize the impact of noise, debris, dust, and other potentially dangerous materials & issues during the time of destruction of existing buildings. My neighborhood/a town house complex/ has been separated from that plaza only by a wall that won't protect us from these impacts. Were the authors of the report specifically looking at our complex when they concluded that there will be no significant negative effects on the environment?

Another important issue: will the developer be required to use any green building materials?

Thanks in advance,

Milina
